ENDORSED BY THE MAINE VETERAN. To the Editor of the Commercial

Dear Sir —I wish you would insert in your valuable pager the views of a soldier on the Dependent Pension bill. On paim reflection we find quite a reaction in favor of the President's att tude on this bill. The bill itself was week in its incep ion, incongruous in all its parts reckless in its tendencies and as the President said, would admit of mist any construction, at any rate, it would have opened the treasury doors for the outet of an appalling amount of money. A child should have formulated a more consistent bill. Thousands of those who never left the State would have fared equally with those who fought and suffered four years. Although many of a safe poor and needy we should have a little regard for the country at large. For one, i am glad the President, find the nerve to stand between the people's money at disorreckless a bill. To the Editor of the Commercial up as we came—for her head was bowel—and greeted us. Lee asked her how she had slopt.

"Ill, my Kallikrates," she answered—full. This night have stringe and hidgons dreams come creeping through my brain, and I know not what they portent. Almost do I feel as though some o'il overshadowed me; and yet how can o'il touch me? I wonder," she went on, with a sudden outbreak of womanly tenderness—"I wonder if, should anght happen to me, so that I slept and left thee waking, wouldst then think gently of me? I wonder, my Kathantes, if thou wouldst tarry til. I came again, as for so many centuries I have tarried for they coming?" Then, without wating for an answer, she went on: "Come, le: us be setting forth, for we hape fit to go, and before another day is born in yonder blue should we stand in the place of Life."

In five minutes more we were once more on our way through the vast rained city, that formed at us on other side in the gray daw jing in a way that was at once gend and appressive, Just as the first my of the rising sun shet like a golden arrow athwart this stadied desolation we gained the further gate, way of the outer wall, and having given one more gance at the hoar and pillarpd majery through which we had passed, and (with the exception of Job, for whom ruins had no charms) breathed a sigh of regret that we had not tarm in the point.

As the sun roses odid Ayesha's spirits till by hard feet the station of the plant here.

note had more time to explore it, passed through the great most, and on to the plain beyond.

As the sun rose so did Ayeshn's spirits, till by meakfast time they had gained their normal level, and she laughingly set down her frequency depression to the associations of the knot where she had slept.

"These barbarians declare that Kor is hannted," she said, "and of a truth I do believe their saying, for never did I know so I' a night, save ome. I remember it now. It was on that very spot when then didst lit doad at my feet, Kallikrates. Never wil visit it again, it is a place off evil onen."

After a very brief halt for breakfast we pressed on with such good will that by a clock in the afternoon we were at the foot of the vast wall of rock that formed the life of the volcane, and whigh at this point towered up precipitously above us for 1,500 of 2,000 feet. Here we halted, certainly not a my astonishment, for I did not see how it was possible that we should go any further "how," said Ayespla, as she descended from her litter, "doth our labor but commence, for here do we part with these men, and henceforward we must bear ourselves," and then, addressing Billali, "do thou and these slay a remain hore, and abide lour coming. By 1-morrow at the midday we shall be with these if not, wait."

morrow at the midday we shall be with these if not, wait."

Billali bowed bumplly, and said that her august bidding should be obeyed if they stopped there till they grow old.

"And this man, O Holly "said She, pointing to Job; "best is it that he should tarry also, for if his heart be not high and his congegereat, perchance some eviling his our take him. Also, the secrets of the place whither we go are not fit for common eyes."

I translated this to Job, who he sandly did armestly cutreated me, almost with tears in his eyes, not to leave him behind. He said that be was sure that he could see nothing worse than he had already seen, and that he was strriffed to death at the idea of being let alone with those "dumb folk," who, be thought, would probably have the opportionity to hot pot him.

I translated what he said to Ayesha, who shrugged her shoulders, and answered, "We let him come, it is mught to me; on his own head be it, and he will serve to bear the lam and this," and she pointed to a narrow plant, some sixteen foot long, which had been bound above the long bearing pole of her hammork, as I had thought. To make the critains suread above the long bearing pole of ser instances, as I had thought, to make the cirtains spread out better, but, as it now uppeared, for some unknown purpose connected with our extraordinary undertaking.

Accordingly the plank, which, though tough, was very light, was given to Job to carry, and also one of the lamps. I slung the other on to my back, together with a spare jar of oil, while Lee loaded himself with the provisions and some water in a kirt's skin. When this was done She malle Billall and the six bearer mutes to retreat behind, a grove of flowering rhagneliss about 100 yards away and remain there under the pain of death till, we had vanished. They bowed humbly and, went, and, as we departed, old Billall gave the a friendly shake of the hand add whispered that he had rather that it was I than is who was going on this wonderful expedition with. "She-who-must-be-obeyed," and upor my world I felt inclined to agree with him. In another minute they were gone, and then having briefly asked us if we were ready Ayesha turned and gazed up the tolyering cliff.

"Goodness me, Leo," I said, "sarely we are

Ayesha turned and gazed up the overlap cliff.

"Goodness me, Leo," I said, "sarely we are not going to climb that?"
Leo shrugged his shoulders, being in a condition of half fascinated, half expectant mys tideation, and, as he did so, Ayesha with a sudden move began to climb the cliff, and of course we had to follow her. It was perfectly marvelous to see the sask and gang will which she sprang from rock to rock an swung herself along the ledges. The ascent was not, however, so difficult as it looked, all though there were one or two nasty places. was not, however, so difficult as it looked, all though there were one or two nasty places where it did not do to look behind you, the fact being that the rock still sloped here and was not absolutely precipitous as it was higher up. In this way, we, with no great above our last standing place, the only really troublesome thing to manage being Job's board, and in doing so drew some fifty no sirtly paces to the left of our starting point for we went up like a crab, sideways Presently we reached a ledge, narrow enough at first, but which widened as we followed, it, and, what is more, sloped however, it, and, what is more, sloped hower, followed it we gradually got into a kind of rut or fold of rock that grew deeper and deeper, ill at last it resembled a Devonshiro lane in stone, and hid us perfectly from the gaze of anybody on the slope below, if there had been anybody to gaze. This lane (which appeared to be a natural formation) continus for some fifty on sixty paces, then suddenly ended in a cavo, also natural, running a right angles to it. I am sure that it was natural cave, and not hollowed by the hand of man, because of its irregular and contract, which gave it the appearance of having been blown bodily in the mountain by some frightful emption of gas following the line of the least resistance. All the caves hollowed by the accidents of Koron the contrary, were out out with the meaning the two hamps, which, I did, giving one to her and keeping the other, my self. Then, taking the lead, she advanced down the cavern, pleking her way with great care, as indeed, it was necessary to do, for the floor was most irregular extrewn with boal ders like the bod of a stream, and in some places pitted with deep holes, in which it would have been easy to break one's leg.

This, cavern we pursued for twenty minutes or more, it being, so far as if could form, a judgment—owing to its numerous lwiss and turns, no casy task—about a quarker of turns! though there were one or two masty places where it did not do to look behind you, tar, a judgment—was and turns, no easy task—about a quarter of c. mile long.

At last, however, we halted at its further chd, and whilst I was still trying to piecco the gloom a great gust of uir came tearing down it, and entinguished both the lamps.

Ayesha called to us, and we cropt up to her, for she was a little in front, and were rewarded with a view that was postavely appelling in the gloom and grandeur.

"Here must we press," said. Ayesha. "Becareful last giddiness overcome, ye, or the wind sweep ye into the guilf beneath, for of a truth it had ine hottom; and, without giving us any further time to get scared, she started walking along the spin; leaving its to follow her as best we might. I was must to her, then came Job, painfully dragging lits plaifs, while Lee brought up the river. It was a wonderful sight to see this interpol woman gilding facting the seed of the spin of the work would be the property of the are may be what for west like greaters of the air may be write the seed of the control was a very few years, what for west its greaters of the air may be writed asset it as a like a wind asset.

SHE A History of Advantures.

BY H. REDGE HAGGARD.

CHAPTER XXIV

WALKING THE PLANK

Next day the mutter awoke us before to dawn; and by the time that we had got besteep out of our eyes, and gone through a very perfunctory wash at a spring which still welled up into the remains of a marble basin in the center of the north quadrungle of the vast outer court, we found She standing by the latter, rendy to start, while old-Billial and the two bearer mutes were busy collecting the body got the serious provided hose ever, that she seemed very depressed, and had every, that she seemed very depressed, and had which would have betrayed her among a thousand women of the sume stature, even if they had been veiled like herself. She locked up as we came—for her head was bowell-and greeted us. Lee asked her how she had slopt.

"Ill, my Kalliktetes," she answered—full.

This wind in the event in the defense of the sent stature, even in the production of the proof and her head was bowell-and greeted us. Lee asked her how she had slopt.

"Ill, my Kalliktetes," she answered—full.

This wind is an interpretable of the sent of the sent of the status of the proof and before it will be a suited and proceed up to the sent of the proof and before it was a likely to the sent of the proof and the sent of the sent of the proof and the sent of the sent of the proof and the sent of the sent of the proof and the sent of the sent of the proof and the sent of the sent of the proof and the sent of the sent of the sent of the proof and the sent of the sent of the sent of the proof and the sent of the sent of the proof and the sent of the proof and the sent of the sent

"We observed here, and expet print filty along the quivering path, against which the wind stronked and wailed as it shook it, claying it to running like a vast turing of the guivering path, against which the wind stronked and wailed as it shook it, claying it to running like a vast turing of the guivering road to want highly a whole it was also largely necessary, until set last we say that we were on the very tip of the span a stab of reck, I tills sight it is a fail of reck, I till sight the less of the hideon depth that throtically at a jump. Here my necessary and steady of the ground, and looked also it, while alwest stook learning at against the wind, down which her long being at against the wind, down which her long being at along between us, had been provided. Before a was an unity space, on the other side of which was something, as yet we could not see vant, for ache—either owing it the shadow of the opposite either owing it which was something, as yet we could not see vant, for ache—either owing it the shadow of the opposite either, or fain some other cause—the gloom was that of right.

"Ye must wait awhite," called Ayespa: "soon there will be hight."

At the moment brould hot imagine what also meant. How could more light than there was over come to his drea dful spot! Whilst I was still debating in my mind, suddenly, like a great sword of fame, a seam from the setting on hisroed the Stygian gloom, and smote upon the point of rock whereon we are, illuminating Ayesha's lovely form with an unear, hily splendor. I only with that I could describe the wild ind marketons heauty of that spront of fire, had serves the daminity word was stabled, and where it lay there was higher the could reserve the sum of the form of the could repea

Platform Passing The the relation of thirty dollars a year was imposed, as required by a law of the State low's Hail, Tuesday evening, under the density evening and extended bodge of Good Templars, was quite well attended but not so well as the occasion deserved, for at that time Rev. B. B. Merrilli delivered at very stirring and interesting address, which has number of admissiors to the several classes since 1881 has been clearly less than it would have been under free tuition. This would have been under free tuition. This number is now increasing from year to quirement upon the number of students will scarcely be perceptible. Expenses are moderate. Board in the college dining hall is two dollars and sixty couts per week, for thirty-six weeks in ty cents per week, for thirty six weeks in boy, is in the year. The heating of rooms, princifew days. pally by steam, costa yout twenty dollars a year for each rooms. For mechanical students, the course of instruction in the visa shop costs ten dollars; in the forge shop, nine dollars; and in the wood shop. four dollars. Students in the Chemical Laboratory pay for in ary to apparatus. for glassware broken, and for chemicals used. The charges indicated, together with pay for books and incidental items, make the needful term expenses at the college, approximately two hundred dollars a year. At militury drill, students wear a uniform which may be, and is also generally worn at the class-room exercises. The long vacation is in the winter, affording an opportunity for students to teach—an opportunity of which fully sixty per cent, avail themselves each year, The two terms of the year are so arranged that the short vacation includes the month of July, when many students find remunerative employment in the having field. It thus comes about that many students pay the larger part of their expenses from carnings while in college. Compensation is made for ordinary work by stucents, on the farm and about the college buildngs, but the amount from this source is 1869, it has been each year the recipient, the labor in the field, in the shop, in the in one form or another, of individual favor laboratory, and in the drawing rooms is educational, and therefore without direct pecuniary compensation.

Of the 222 graduates prior to 3886, 210 are now living. It appears that only nine per cent, of the graduates are engaged in t 10 ac-called professions, and that ninetyone per cent. are engaged in varied and largely practical industries.

The Cleveland Climax

|New York Tribune. Mr. Cleveland cannot be said to have sprung the disgraceful order for the return of the rebel flags upon the American people. He led up to it. He had prepared the boys in blue and all oher patrictic Americans for that superb feat of toadyism to the lost cause of rebell on by a series of Tesser performances of the same off-color.

President Cleveland had suffered a no torious vilifler of the beloved Lincoln to be a pension clerk. President Cleveland had allowed the wearer of a searf-pln which had been fashioned from the skull of a Union suldier to hold a position in one of the departments. President Cleveland, on the death of "Jake" Thompson, the arch-secessionist who had robbed the Government and conspired to burn Northern cities, had insulted the American flag by having it displayed at hall-mast over the Interior Department

President Cleveland had appointed to the Russian Mission a Confederate officer, who evinced his contempt for reconstruction by neglecting or refusing to have his own political disabilities removed. President, Cleveland had written in effusive letter for the unveiling of a monument to Albert Sidney Johnston, the other fea ture of the exercises being a speech by Jefferson Day 5, and Johnston being one of the most conspicuous of the deserters of the United States; Army.

President C eveland, on a similar occasion, had composed another letter in ended for the public eye in which John C. Calhoun was commended as a "statesman."

It was by such and many similar steps that President Cleveland reached his elimax of applied copperheadism. And because, ong sufering, good-natured countrymen who are loyal to the backbone paid small beed to what he did, remembering that his own and his party's record rendered his tondying to the South—the old South the mest natural thing in the would, he thought he could venture with impunity to meddle with the flags which Inlin soldiers had captured from traitors. Le knows better now. He does not cut as handsome a figure as he did in Bourbon eyes, but he is wheer than he was. He has aroused the North, and the North bas spoken a no uncertain tones. The prompt escinding of the prior is the latest of sany tributes which patriotism has exrted from copperheadism.

On Hyrricane Island he found 200 granite workers employed and everything moving along harmoniously, the men well treated, wages good and all things harmonious and satisfactory. At Vinal Hayen the condition of the men was the same. Four hundreft new employed men working under an agreement which will last a year, all speak highly of Governor Bodwell, the head of the Bodwell Granite Co. which operates here. They think he wishes to do well by them and the kindliest feeling exists between employers and employed. Commissioner Matthews will probably visit Lewiston and Auburn next week to make a tour of the various manufactories.
